Forest H. Belt

Radio communication is an extensive subject and one that causes a lot of head scratching. Two key variables when discussing range are power and frequency. Less power means less range. The frequency of the radio is a more complex subject. If you want to have two-way radios operating in the same area, you must make sure the frequency is not the same. The radio frequency determines the distance in miles that the signal will travel. A low frequency has a large range due to it's ability to go through trees and buildings. A high frequency signal will travel a shorter distance, but will be less likely to be interrupted.
